

POCUS for Rural Healthcare

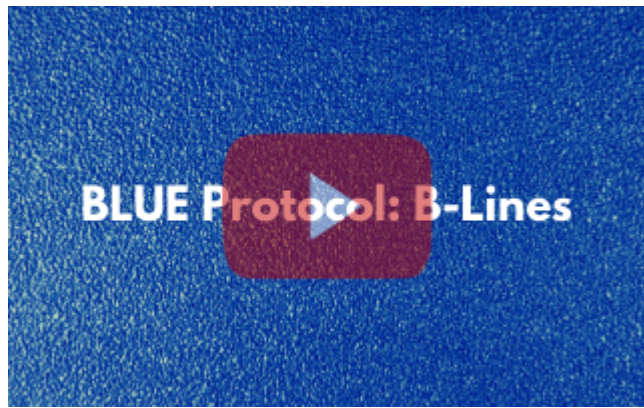

The Unique Healthcare Challenges of Rural Communities

"The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) have identified the five leading causes of death in the United States:

1. Heart Disease
2. Cancer
3. Unintentional Injury
4. Chronic Lower Respiratory Disease
5. Stroke

The CDC notes that individuals residing in rural communities are more likely to die prematurely from these chronic illnesses than those in urban populations. There are several contributing factors that rural residents face that create severe health disparities in their communities."
