

A Milestone of a Year

"We all do it. The eleventh month of the year arrives, and we can't help but look back at the last forty or so weeks. We assess each day, determining if we loved enough, laughed enough, accomplished enough, and did everything we set out to do.

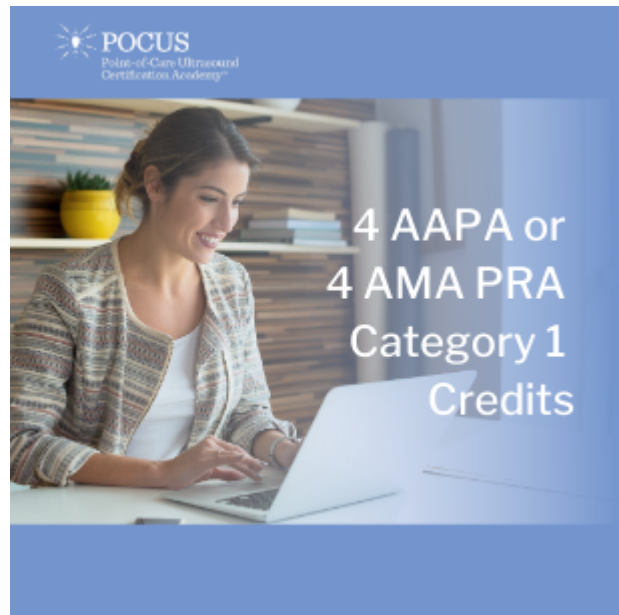

No matter how well prepared and organized we are, the mysteries of our tomorrows will always force us to modify our best intentions. So, instead of using our plans to determine wins or losses, maybe we can decide from day one that when those 52 weeks have gone by, a celebration is in order no matter what."
